MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. – Oct. 5, 2015 – ABILITY Network, a leading healthcare information technology company, announced today that Stan E. Opstad has joined the organization's management team as Senior Vice President of Product Management.

In this position Opstad will be responsible for leading the product team, strategic product development and growing market share for the company.

"I'm very excited to welcome Stan to the ABILITY team," said Ken Ernsting, COO and Executive Vice President of ABILITY Network. "As we look at our next phase of growth, Stan brings the experience and leadership to create a world class product management organization at ABILITY. His expertise leading product teams in support of innovation is matched by his ability to deliver quality services and improved customer experience. All of these areas are integral to the continued growth and success of ABILITY. We're looking forward to having Stan join us as a leader in that effort."

Opstad comes to ABILITY with many years of experience in the health IT industry. Most recently he was Vice President, Product Management, at Surgical Information Systems, a provider of information systems and software solutions for the surgical environment. Prior to that, Opstad served as Senior Vice President of Product Management and Strategy for Healthland, a developer of EHR systems for rural community and critical access hospitals, clinics and health centers. Opstad also was Director of Product Management at Ingenix (now known as OptumInsight), a subsidiary of UnitedHealth Group.

Opstad received a B.S. in marketing from Minnesota State University in Mankato, Minnesota, and an M.B.A. in strategic management from the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis.
